The Covid-19 pandemic presents unforeseen challenges before the society and has shown various dimensions of itself. Since the time the first case was reported globally towards the end of 2019 the crisis has unfolded its various layers and apart from the challenges related to medical and health other issues such as the economic impact, the psycho-social impact, the impact on the international trust and cooperation have also come up. It's a matter of pride to say that the police department is wholeheartedly fighting this crisis along with the other wings of government. The myriad of issues involved, viz social distancing, taking care of the stranded persons and migrant labourers, attending to health emergencies of certain patients, etc. apart from dealing with the positive cases have seen police at the forefront.

The lockdown has resulted in screen time increase for all as we keep glued to our screens be it for information or entertainment. It gives more opportunities to the cyber criminals and consequently we are seeing that various kinds of cyber offences are being reported. Several spurious websites have cropped up asking for donations or in the garb of providing Covid19 related information or treatments, exploit the gullible persons. We urge the people to exercise caution in using newer apps, websites or mobile numbers unless the source is authenticated. Remember precaution is better than cure.

The public in general have cooperated well with the authorities in the imposition of lockdown. With the lockdown now in the third phase and the government easing some restrictions it is imperative for all that the conditions are followed in toto and the given permissions are not misused given the fact that the number of cases is still on an upward slope nationally. Meanwhile, as per the current understanding worldwide, the battle with Corona is going to be a long drawn one and the Rachakonda police is fully geared up to deal with it, the only requirements from the general populace being their cooperation and patience.

Best Wishes,
Convener Cyber Security Forum - RKSC

From the Jt. Secretary of Women's Forum's desk ...

Dear Readers,

First and foremost, my heartfelt thanks to the Government, Law enforcement bodies, police, doctors, health workers and many more such unsung heroes during these testing times of COVID-19. Margadarshaks are playing pivotal role and providing online counselling to handle distress, trauma, anxiety. We urge women not to suffer silently and in case of any help needed at any time of the day or night, reach out to the Rachakonda Police WhatsApp no: 9490617111.

As we move forward to battle the Corona and also stand up against domestic violence and abuse, we appeal to all women to be confident and also keep the emergency numbers handy and reach us any time without any hesitation.

Please stay safe.

TISS team generates data on migrant workers

To sync their urgent needs with relief measures extended by the govt. and NGOs

M.L.MELLY MAITREYI
HYDERABAD

The faculty of Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Hyderabad, which has done a survey to find the needs of migrant workers who were thrown off guard by the imposition of lockdown has identified that an authentic database on migrant workers remained a critical gap in matching the immediate needs of the workers with the relief measures extended by the government and civil society organisations.

The mapping exercise on 'Socio-economic vulnerabilities and rapid assessment of needs of migrant workers in Hyderabad', conceived and conducted by the TISS team in collaboration with Rachakonda Police Commissionerate has indicated that an authentic database order will go a long way in matching pressing needs of the migrant workers with the relief measures, and put in place more coordinated and focused short-term and long-term policy interventions. Even now, after almost a month of lockdown, a number of key concerns such as food, livelihoods, shelter and transport remain to be addressed at the policy and intervention levels while visuals of lengthy lines of hungry and tired migrant workers on a long march home have become enduring images of the crisis fuelled by COVID-19. The objectives of the survey are to capture the migrant workers' socio-demographic profile, economic and current health status, perceived most important needs and immediate assistance needed from the government. 35-item schedule The TISS faculty team developed a brief 35-item schedule as a Google form that could be accessed on a smartphone for the data collection, said U. Vinidhya, deputy director, TISS-Hyderabad Campus. Helping the TISS team in data collection are a set of volunteers from Citizens' Security Council under the aegis of Rachakonda Police Commissionerate. They also helped in mobilising identified migrant workers from the jurisdiction of each police station, she said. In the exercise that began on April 15, so far 8,235 individuals have been interviewed out of 10,000 migrant worker population across nine police station limits. "The data generated will enable a rapid assessment of migrant workers' needs so that more coordinated, focused and organised relief measures can be initiated to mitigate their suffering," Prof Vinidhya said. For instance, in the early days of lockdown, many organisations started distributing food packets. Talking to migrants from northern States revealed that they would be happy to get dry rations and rather cook themselves. Accordingly, Rachakonda Police officials coordinated the relief by talking to donor agencies. The data can also be used by the administration to plan and coordinate transportation of the migrant workers to their home states. The long term outcome is the use of data for advocacy and further research as the database has details such as migrant workers' current location in the city, occupation and contact number, details of home State, district and panchayat they come from, socio-economic details like living arrangements, family members, remittance pattern, support received from government and NGOs during lockdown et al.
